Mental health problems - early care helps

Summary

- There is a range of services available to assist you with emotional and mental health difficulties. If you need help, it’s important that you seek advice early.
- You should discuss your problem with your doctor or community health centre professional, who may refer you to a specialist mental health service.

If emotional or behavioural problems are significantly disrupting your life, it’s important that you seek professional assistance early.

The term ‘mental health problem’ describes a broad range of emotional and behavioural difficulties, which will affect most people at some stage in their lives, including:

- Anxiety
- Irritability
- Sadness
- Loss of energy or motivation.

People experiencing these feelings may get through the crisis without needing professional help. However, it is sometimes difficult for people to overcome emotional or behavioural difficulties, and this may affect their ability to care for themselves or their dependents, to socialise, to work or to study. In these instances, it may be important to seek advice from a professional.

Almost all mental health problems can be treated or at least lessened in their severity and – as with many physical health problems – it is better to receive treatment early.

Symptoms of mental health problems

Specialist psychiatric assessment is required to diagnose a serious mental illness or disorder. However, symptoms that may indicate something serious is going on include:

- Bizarre or unusual thinking
- Hallucinations
- Significant changes of mood, such as pronounced depression, pronounced anxiety, or pronounced elevation in mood
- Restless, agitated and disorganised behaviour, or marked decrease in activity
- Significant impairment of social and/or occupational functioning
- Significant impairment in self-care
- Suicidal thoughts or acts of self-harm
- Destructive or high risk behaviour
- Confusion and disorientation.

Help for mental health problems
In urgent mental health and crisis situations, the emergency ambulance and police may be the first point of contact for the public on emergency ‘000’.

If you need non-urgent help, you should contact your local doctor or community health centre in the first instance. Doctors have a key role in managing mental health problems. They can provide assessment and treatment for many common problems, such as depression and anxiety, and can give formal referrals to psychiatrists and other mental health practitioners if needed.

Another option is to discuss your problems with a trained counsellor. Counselling may be available at your local community health centre (CHC), which can offer a range of community health services to local residents with a focus on health promotion, disease prevention and management. The location of your nearest CHC can be accessed through your local telephone directory or council offices.

Specialist mental health services are available

Public specialist mental health services are available to assess and treat people with serious mental illness, including those experiencing a psychiatric crisis. People who have a serious mental illness or disorder will usually have a significant disturbance in thought, mood, or behaviour.

Specialist mental health services can be contacted 24 hours a day, seven days a week. You can locate the service applicable to your area at www.health.vic.gov.au/mentalhealth (click on the ‘accessing services’ tab).

Professional staff at the specialist mental health service will ask you about the problem, including questions about why you have contacted the service and whether you have used public mental health services before. This information will help staff decide which service is most useful to you.

Services available to children and adolescents include:
- Community-based assessment and treatment
- Inpatient care.

Services available for adults include:
- Continuing clinical care
- Crisis assessment and treatment
- Mobile support and treatment
- Acute inpatient care
- Residential rehabilitation
- Non-residential rehabilitation
- Secure extended inpatient care
- Residential and non-residential disability support.

Services available for older persons include:
- Assessment and treatment
- Acute inpatient care
- Interim mental health residential hostel or nursing home care.

A case manager will oversee treatment

If you are assessed as needing specialist mental health treatment, then a case manager will be assigned to you. A case manager is a mental health professional who will coordinate the services provided to you. The case manager could be a psychiatric nurse, a social worker, an occupational therapist or a psychologist.

Where to get help

- Your local doctor
- A community health centre in your area
- SuicideLine Tel 1300 651 251
- Lifeline Tel. 13 11 14
- Kids Help Line Tel. 1800 55 1800
- Mensline Australia Tel. 1300 789 978

Things to remember

- There is a range of services available to assist you with emotional and mental health difficulties. If you need help, it’s important that you seek advice early.
- You should discuss your problem with your doctor or community health centre professional, who may refer you to a specialist mental health service.

This page has been produced in consultation with and approved by:

Department of Health and Human Services - HSP&A - Mental Health

Content on this website is provided for information purposes only. Information about a therapy, service, product or treatment does not in any way endorse or support such therapy, service, product or treatment and is not intended to replace advice from your doctor or other registered health professional. The information and materials contained on this website are not intended to constitute a comprehensive guide concerning all aspects of the therapy, product or treatment described on the website. All users are urged to always seek advice from a registered health care professional for diagnosis and answers to their medical questions and to ascertain whether the particular therapy, service, product or treatment described on the website is suitable in their circumstances. The State of Victoria and the Department of Health & Human Services shall not bear any liability for reliance by any user on the materials contained on this website.

For the latest updates and more information, visit www.betterhealth.vic.gov.au

Copyright © 1999/2019 State of Victoria. Reproduced from the Better Health Channel (www.betterhealth.vic.gov.au) at no cost with permission of the Victorian Minister for Health. Unauthorised reproduction and other uses comprised in the copyright are prohibited without permission.