Obsessive compulsive disorder - family and friends

betterhealth.vic.gov.au
Obsessive compulsive disorder (OCD) is characterised by recurring unwanted and intrusive thoughts, impulses and images (obsessions), as well as repetitive behavioural and mental rituals (compulsions).

It can be difficult, demanding and exhausting to live with a person who has OCD. Family members and friends may become deeply involved in the person’s rituals and may have to assume responsibility and care for many daily activities that the person with OCD is unable to undertake. This can cause distress and disruption to all members of the family.

People with OCD are usually aware that their obsessions and compulsions are irrational and excessive, yet feel unable to control or resist them. OCD can take up many hours of a person’s day and may severely affect work, study, and family and social relationships.

Understanding OCD can help

People with OCD often feel frustrated and distressed about their need to act compulsively. When family members and friends are more informed about OCD, it is easier to be supportive and understanding.

Many people with OCD experience intense fears of something terrible happening to themselves or others, have constant doubts about their behaviour, and frequently seek reassurance from others.

Common misconceptions include that OCD is caused by laziness, lack of willpower, bad parenting or trauma. Assumptions like these lead to blame and guilt. Many OCD behaviours that are irritating and demanding are actually symptoms of the condition.

There are many OCD resources available that can help resolve misunderstandings and concerns about this disorder. These include books, podcasts, and websites with information about specific aspects of OCD (such as hoarding, obsessional thinking and hyper-responsibility) and community resources such as telephone helplines and support groups.

Offer support and understanding to people you know with OCD

It is important to communicate clearly that you understand the difference between the behavioural symptoms of OCD and the person: ‘I know this is not you, this is your OCD.’ This will help to diminish the person’s feelings of guilt and low self-worth and reduce their levels of stress and anxiety. Other suggestions include:

- Encourage the person to talk about the disorder so that you can learn how it affects them and how you can be more supportive, but don’t engage in discussions about the logic of OCD as most people with OCD know their obsessions and compulsions are excessive and irrational.
- Encourage the person to seek professional help. OCD is generally not a condition that will go away without treatment. You can assist in locating an experienced therapist and offer to be involved in their treatment program. If the OCD has involved you or other family or friends extensively in rituals and avoidance behaviours, you will need to know the best ways to modify your involvement so that the treatment can be as effective as possible.
- Encourage discussion about OCD as a common and treatable anxiety condition that is nothing to be embarrassed or ashamed of. Support the person with OCD to share their experiences with family and friends – this will help to break the secrecy about OCD.
- Acknowledge improvements, however small, and encourage the person to reward themselves for their progress.
- Try to be patient and maintain a non-judgemental attitude – this will support the person to focus their efforts on recovery rather than dealing with anger and resentment.
- If their motivation wanes and they consider stopping treatment, remind them of the gains they have made.

Don’t reinforce obsessive compulsive behaviours

Families and friends often get involved in OCD behaviours. It may seem like the only way to reduce the distress that the person with OCD is experiencing. You may feel that it is easier to keep things functioning if you can quickly comply with their request, rather than dealing with the protracted anxiety, tears, or arguments that may arise if you don’t do what is asked.

Helping a person with OCD with their rituals, responding to requests for reassurance or undertaking tasks that they want to avoid, are all behaviour patterns that maintain OCD and may create an obstacle to the person’s recovery.

It can be very difficult to reduce this type of involvement in a person’s OCD, especially if it has been going on for a long time. It is important to ‘normalise’ family or household routines and refuse to participate in reinforcing OCD behaviours. This should be done in a gradual way and preferably as part of a cognitive behavioural treatment program.
Suddenly stopping all involvement in a person’s OCD could trigger overwhelming distress for the person with OCD and lead to increased symptoms, high agitation, anxiety and depression.

Some suggestions include:

- Talk openly about behaviours that impact on household routines and time. Plan ways in which family and friends can gradually reduce their participation in the person’s rituals and explain the reasons for doing this. Encourage the person with OCD to be a part of decision making about how this is achieved.
- If the person with OCD is in treatment, offer to attend a session with them so that you can seek advice about how you can best support their treatment program.
- Try to maintain normal household routines whenever possible.
- Focus on strengthening family and social connections, and reinforce a sense of stability by maintaining positive traditions and occasions – celebrate birthdays and anniversaries, or have regular family dinners. Reinforce positive communication and behaviours (such as sharing, hugs and helping each other) and keep up family activities such as going to the footy, or taking the dog to the park.

Reach out for support and help for yourself

If you live with someone with OCD, it is likely you will need some support and help for yourself. Over time, OCD in the family or household can lead to everyone feeling isolated and alone. It is important to maintain your connections and supports among your extended family and friends.

If these support networks are limited or unable to meet your needs, consider seeking out supports in the community. Suggestions include:

- Contact a telephone helpline for families and carers of people with OCD and anxiety conditions, such as the ARCVIC OCD and Anxiety Helpline Tel, 1300 269 438.
- Attend a support group for families and friends in similar situations.
- Attend education and skills groups for carers of people with OCD.
- Seek out information or workshops on stress management, relaxation and mindfulness meditation, and healthy living.
- If your physical or emotional health is suffering, seek professional help for yourself – short-term counselling and support can be found through your GP, local community health centre, or a private psychologist.

When the person who has OCD refuses treatment

A person who has OCD may be reluctant to seek professional help. They may have fears such as:

- the stigma associated with mental illness
- the possibility of being found to be really ’mad’ or ’crazy’
- having to give up their compulsions – they may feel that the behaviours are necessary to their survival and that it would be impossible to stop them
- becoming addicted to medications
- ‘failing’ at the therapy
- appearing weak because they can’t deal with their problem on their own

Suggestions for supporting the person with OCD include:

- Offer reassurance that OCD is a recognised and treatable illness.
- Assist them to be fully informed about effective treatments, including medication and psychological therapy. Information about available options can help alleviate many of the fears that people with OCD have about treatment, such as: how the treatments work, what is expected of the person, how long it should take, what self-management strategies can improve recovery, and how these treatments have helped others with OCD.
- Encourage them to seek treatment from a professional who is experienced in treating OCD. Fears and worries about treatment may be exacerbated if the person with OCD is exposed to an incompetent or inappropriate treatment service.
- Don’t try to bully or ridicule a person with OCD into getting treatment – strong-arm tactics won’t work and will only increase their feelings of powerlessness and failure.
- Emphasise that knowing when to seek help is actually a sign of strength, not weakness.
- Seek advice from professionals and support groups on your own, if necessary.
- Sometimes, despite your best efforts, you have to accept there’s nothing more you can do to encourage the person to seek help – in this case, you need to find avenues of support and strength for yourself.
- If you think the person is in danger of harming themselves or someone else, call your doctor, local mental health service crisis assessment team or the police (dial 000).

Where to get help

- Your doctor
- Anxiety Recovery Centre Victoria Tel. (03) 9830 0533 or 1300 ANXIETY (269 438)
- SANE Australia Tel. 1800 18 SANE (7263), Monday to Friday 9.00am to 5.00pm

References

Send us your feedback

- Rate this website
- Your comments

betterhealth.vic.gov.au
1/4 How would you rate this website?

- Excellent
- Good
- Average
- Fair
- Poor

Next Submit Now Cancel

Send us your feedback

- Rate this website
- Your comments
- Questions
- Your details

Please note that we cannot answer personal medical queries. If you are looking for health or medical advice we recommend that you:

- talk to your doctor or pharmacist
- dial triple zero (000) in an emergency
- ring NURSE-ON-CALL Tel. 1300 60 60 24.

2/4 Your Comments

Tell us who you are
Select an option

Enter your comments below (optional)

Next Submit Now Cancel

Send us your feedback

- Rate this website
- Your comments
- Questions
- Your details

3/4 Questions

What are you here to do?  Looking for information on

Did you find what you were looking for?

- Yes
- No

Next Submit Now Cancel

Send us your feedback

- Rate this website
- Your comments
- Questions
- Your details

4/4 Your details

Postcode

Email Address

Submit Now Cancel

Send us your feedback

Thank you. Your feedback has been successfully sent.

More information

betterhealth.vic.gov.au
Anxiety explained

- Anxiety and fear in children
  You can help your child overcome anxiety by taking their fears seriously and encouraging them to talk about their feelings.
- Anxiety disorders
  Anxiety disorders are common mental health problems that affect many people.
- Anxiety Disorders - Diagnosis (video)
  Anxiety disorders are common, affecting about one in ten with persistent, excessive worrying that can hinder their ability to function. They may worry constantly about things that do not warrant it or...
- Anxiety Disorders - treatment and support (video)
  In this video clip, participants discuss the various forms of treatment and support they have received from medical professionals as well as from other sources. Some of the strategies for managing...
- Depression explained
  The most important thing is to recognise the signs and symptoms and seek support.
- Fighting your fears
  Fear is a natural human emotion, and it is something that everyone experiences in their lifetime. What matters most is how you fight your fears, and whether you let them affect your life.
- Generalised anxiety disorder (GAD)
  Worrying can be constructive if it helps you to work out possible solutions to a problem, but some people are troubled by excessive anxiety.
- Let's talk about depression in men
  Depression affects men of all ages, however men continue to seek help for mental health issues at significantly lower rates than women. Jonathan experienced depression and anxiety throughout his..
- Managing and treating anxiety
  Learning all about anxiety is central to recovery.
- Self-harm and self-injury
  Self-harm and self-injury is when people hurt themselves on purpose, usually in response to intense emotional pain or negative feelings, thoughts or memories.

Phobias

- Agoraphobia
  A person with agoraphobia is afraid to leave familiar environments, because they are afraid of having a panic attack.
- Anxiety Disorders - Diagnosis (video)
  Anxiety disorders are common, affecting about one in ten with persistent, excessive worrying that can hinder their ability to function. They may worry constantly about things that do not warrant it or...
- Anxiety Disorders - treatment and support (video)
  In this video clip, participants discuss the various forms of treatment and support they have received from medical professionals as well as from other sources. Some of the strategies for managing...
- Claustrophobia
  With appropriate treatment, it is possible to overcome claustrophobia or any other phobia.
- Fear of flying
  About one in six people have a significant fear that prevents them from flying, so fear of flying is common.

betterhealth.vic.gov.au
• Fighting your fears
  Fear is a natural human emotion, and it is something that everyone experiences in their lifetime. What matters most is how you fight your fears, and whether you let them affect your life...

• Social phobia
  A person with social phobia experiences anxiety in situations where they are likely to be scrutinised and observed by others...

Obsessive compulsive disorder

• Anxiety Disorders - Diagnosis (video)
  Anxiety disorders are common, affecting about one in ten with persistent, excessive worrying that can hinder their ability to function. They may worry constantly about things that do not warrant it or...

• Anxiety Disorders - treatment and support (video)
  In this video clip, participants discuss the various forms of treatment and support they have received from medical professionals as well as from other sources. Some of the strategies for managing...

• Fighting your fears
  Fear is a natural human emotion, and it is something that everyone experiences in their lifetime. What matters most is how you fight your fears, and whether you let them affect your life...

• Let's talk about depression in men
  Depression affects men of all ages, however men continue to seek help for mental health issues at significantly lower rates than women. Jonathan experienced depression and anxiety throughout his...

Obsessive compulsive disorder

• Obsessive compulsive disorder can have a profound effect on a person's life...

• Obsessive compulsive disorder - family and friends
  Living with a person with OCD can have a major impact on family and friends...

Panic disorder

• Anxiety Disorders - Diagnosis (video)
  Anxiety disorders are common, affecting about one in ten with persistent, excessive worrying that can hinder their ability to function. They may worry constantly about things that do not warrant it or...

• Anxiety Disorders - treatment and support (video)
  In this video clip, participants discuss the various forms of treatment and support they have received from medical professionals as well as from other sources. Some of the strategies for managing...

• Fighting your fears
  Fear is a natural human emotion, and it is something that everyone experiences in their lifetime. What matters most is how you fight your fears, and whether you let them affect your life...

• Let's talk about depression in men
  Depression affects men of all ages, however men continue to seek help for mental health issues at significantly lower rates than women. Jonathan experienced depression and anxiety throughout his...

Panic attack

• Panic disorder and agoraphobia
  Panic disorder is not the same as anxiety or a single panic attack. Most people experience anxiety and up to 40 per cent of us have a panic attack at some stage during our lives. People who have...

Trauma

• Anxiety Disorders - Diagnosis (video)
  Anxiety disorders are common, affecting about one in ten with persistent, excessive worrying that can hinder their ability to function. They may worry constantly about things that do not warrant it or...

• Anxiety Disorders - treatment and support (video)
  In this video clip, participants discuss the various forms of treatment and support they have received from medical professionals as well as from other sources.

---

betterhealth.vic.gov.au

Page 7 of 11
Some of the strategies for managing...

- Fighting your fears

  Fear is a natural human emotion, and it is something that everyone experiences in their lifetime. What matters most is how you fight your fears, and whether you let them affect your life...

- Near-miss experiences and traumatic events

  Traumatic events usually happen quickly and chaotically. A near-miss experience occurs when you are involved in a traumatic event where you think you will die or be badly hurt, but are not. This can...

- Post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD)

  People with post-traumatic stress disorder often experience feelings of panic or extreme fear, which may resemble what was felt during the traumatic event...

- Survivor reactions to traumatic events

  If you have survived a traumatic event, whether you were injured or not, it's important to recognise that trauma also causes emotional harm. Survival is often associated with complex emotional...

- Torture and trauma

  Some survivors of torture and trauma live with their memories for years, or even for the rest of their lives...

- Trauma and children - newborns to two years

  Babies and toddlers can be as affected by trauma as any other family member...

- Trauma and children - tips for parents

  Tell your child the facts about a distressing or frightening experience using language they can understand...

- Trauma and children - two to five years

  Preschoolers may not have the words but will show their distress at traumatic events through changes in behaviour and functioning...

- Trauma and families

  When a family is affected by trauma, everyone will react in a different way...

- Trauma and primary school age children

  Children look to their parents or carers to judge how to deal with a crisis...

- Trauma and teenagers - common reactions

  A teenager may be deeply upset by a traumatic event, but not share their feelings with their parents...

- Trauma - Anne Leadbeater OAM & Dr Rob Gordon

  Trauma experts Dr Rob Gordon and Anne Leadbeater share valuable insights on coping with trauma, helping others who have experienced trauma, and seeking different ways to move forward...

- Trauma - helping family or friends

  There are things you can do to try to help someone who has been through a distressing or frightening event...

Related Information

- Obsessive compulsive disorder

  Obsessive compulsive disorder can have a profound effect on a person's life...

- Agoraphobia

  A person with agoraphobia is afraid to leave familiar environments, because they are afraid of having a panic attack...

- Claustrophobia

  With appropriate treatment, it is possible to overcome claustrophobia or any other phobia...

- Managing and treating anxiety

  Learning all about anxiety is central to recovery...

- Social phobia

  A person with social phobia experiences anxiety in situations where they are likely to be scrutinised and observed by others...

Home
Related information on other websites

- Healthy Place - A Partner and Family Guide to Dealing with OCD.
- Helpguide - Obsessive-Compulsive Disorder (OCD).
- Psych Central - Obsessive-Compulsive Disorder Treatment.

Content Partner

This page has been produced in consultation with and approved by: Anxiety Recovery Centre Victoria

Last updated: May 2017

Content on this website is provided for information purposes only. Information about a therapy, service, product or treatment does not in any way endorse or support such therapy, service, product or treatment and is not intended to replace advice from your doctor or other registered health professional. The information and materials contained on this website are not intended to constitute a comprehensive guide concerning all aspects of the therapy, product or treatment described on the website. All users are urged to always seek advice from a registered health care professional for diagnosis and answers to their medical questions and to ascertain whether the particular therapy, service, product or treatment described on the website is suitable in their circumstances. The State of Victoria and the Department of Health & Human Services shall not bear any liability for reliance by any user on the materials contained on this website.

My Health Life helps you manage your health

With tools, information and recommendations tailored to you, it’s your personal and secure health dashboard.

Learn more

Medical Dictionary

Enter a search term

Search

Search for your topic using the Merriam Webster medical dictionary

betterhealth.vic.gov.au
Find a doctor

Need to find a doctor in your local area? Take a look at the general practitioners entry in our health service profiles.

see general practitioner

Recent Activity

23 people have watched a video today

- Health topics
  - Conditions and treatments
  - Healthy living
  - Services and support

- Explore
  - Recipes
  - Healthy pantry
  - Videos
  - Consumer medicine information
  - Multilingual health information - Health Translations Directory

- About
  - About us
  - Accessibility
  - Content partners
  - Privacy
  - Terms of use
  - Contact us

- Connect with us
  - Facebook
  - Twitter
  - YouTube

Page last reviewed: 30 Mar 2014
